Re: Cadogan Tate Limited v. Skillman
Index Number [to be obtained]

Dear Mrs. Skillman:

We represent Cadogan Tate Limited.

We have reviewed the email correspondence between you and our client regarding the adverse review which first appeared on reviewcentre.com on or before August 6, 2013. On August 28, 2013 you acknowledged that you had posted the review and agreed in writing to remove it in exchange for $5,000.00. On August 30, 2013 our client made the $5,000.00 payment pursuant to said agreement and you accepted it. On September 4, 2013 you asserted in writing that you had removed the review. Nevertheless, you failed to remove the review, which as of the date hereof remains on the website. A printout of the website showing the review is enclosed.

By accepting the $5,000.00 payment and then failing to remove the review, you breached your written agreement with our client. If the review was not yours, then there was fraud.

This letter is being sent to you in an effort to avoid litigation. If on or before October 4, 2013 you perform under the agreement by removing the review, albeit belatedly, we will take no further action and consider the matter closed. If you fail to do so, we have been authorized by our client to pursue legal action against you. Such legal action will include a claim for money damages, a return of the $5,000.00 previously paid to you, and other relief including, if warranted, punitive damages in an exemplary amount.

We suggest that you show this letter to your attorneys.

Please direct all communications regarding this matter to us as the attorneys for Cadogan Tate Limited.

Very truly yours,

Steven Shackman
